BOISE BOYS
Clint Robertson & Luke Caldwell

Best friends and home renovation experts, Clint Robertson and Luke Caldwell, are breathing new life into Idaho's capital city one home at a time in HGTV's hit series Boise Boys. Often referred to as "the Odd Couple of home renovation," business partners and entrepreneurs Clint and Luke are an unlikely pairing that just works.

In 2014, Clint and Luke met through a mutual friend. The duo immediately hit it off and soon after they purchased a home together to renovate. After a few successful remodels, their partnership was forged and Timber + Love, their realty and home design business was born. It is headquartered in a 14,000 sq. ft. warehouse in downtown Boise along the iconic river.

As partners, the pair's personalities and skills complement each other perfectly: Luke approaches design with fun, spontaneity and a talent for gracefully marrying the past and present, while contractor Clint is a can-do real estate businessman who keeps a firm eye on the construction and budget bottom line. The guys' chemistry is a hit with viewers: during its first season Boise Boys pegged impressive viewership numbers and helped HGTV consistently rank as the No. 1 cable network among upscale women 25-54 in the Thursday 11 PM time slot.

After a successful Season 1 produced by High Noon Entertainment (Fixer Upper, Cake Boss), HGTV ordered 13, hour-long episodes which follow the pair as they renovate dilapidated properties into resale-ready homes. While their business is booming, family always comes first for this dynamic duo.
